HARTFORD, OHIO COUNTY, KENTUCKY, JULY 24, 1878.

Down by the meadow brook In childhood I played, So little thinking then What changes Time made.

There stands the old elm, Defying Time's inroads; There will the apple tree,

And love's brightness only Hard by you rivulet, Once almost a river, Spent I in boyish play Fond hours together; The day that I left thee.

Since then many years With the past have been number'd,

Since them many loved ones.
In death long have slumber'd;
But no'er can oblivion,
Nor time's subtle changes, Remove from my hear' The love of thy ranges.

'Neath the blue vault of heaven, Which to smiles on her land, I'll my life's sunny hours

From memory's page sever, Though widely I wander In Life's vast domain, Thy dear walls familiar Shall my heart's home remain.

Love's light by Times shadows May in darkness be shrouded, Bright hopes and prospects By ill fate be clouded. Yet ne'er into my memory

Shalt thou cease to come, For I loce thee! I love thee!

"I don't know about that," answered the deacon doubtfully. "I have always THE MOST COMPLETE DENTAL OF- part with Jennie. But you hang on MY CHILDHOOD HOME. BY K. B. H.

Home of my childhood How fondly I treasure, Thoughts of the sweet hours I spent in thy pleasures;

Neath which my youth growd; There still is the old house, Now quiet and lonely, Once full of childish glen

Sweet home of my childhood, Long on thy threshold In sadness I stood.

In dear old Kentucky, Blest Columbian land, Where true bearts and high minds E'er in happiness blend,

Sweet "home of my childhood," May Time's changes never Those hallowed surroundings
